

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 5, 1901.

IT WAS SAID in these columns recently that if the republican administration would state definitely that this government intends holding Cubs, as all sensible people have known from the first that it will do, then would the Cubans the more quickly accept the inevitable. That this government is preparing to make this announcement is shown by the following from the Philadelphia North American, one of the organs of the administration. It says:

gans of the administration. It says:

The outright refusal of the Cabinet to accept the Cuban Constitution as finally prepared by the Havana convention brings the whole issue down to a question of pure force. Having engaged in a policy of coercion, we cannot stop half way. If a little force does not make the Cubans submit to our will we must use more, or confess our failure. It is plain that the administration proposes to take no step backward Nothing remains, then, but to issue peremptory orders to the convention to accept the Platt amendment, with no conditions. If it still stands out for its rights it must be sent home in disgrace and a more pliant body summoned. It would save much trouble in the future if our military Governor General in the island took the precaution to designate what delegates must be chosen in the event of a second convention. It is a mistake to encourage a people in the notion that they are free to set up their own government, even if they are no stronger than the Cubans, unless we are prepared to accept all the consequences of our generosity. Sconer claist we ware not to find it necessary to re-Cubans, unless we are prepared to accept an the consequences of our generosity. Sconer or later we are apt to find it necessary to resort to brutal methods toward our confiding neighbor. It is not merely that we excite his hatred, but we must in the end suffer in our own ceteem. That is the point we have come to in our treatment of the Cubans.

If the above is not positive assurance enough of the intention of the government regarding Cuba, then the statement of a Cabinet officer made yesterday evening, after the Cuban matter had been discussed at the Cabinet meeting, should dispel any doubt on the subject, for he said, as stated in the Gazette's Washington correspondence of that day: "All the municipal governments we establish in Cubs will be only military ones after all. It you want to call it the establishment of civil rule there for the sake of giving it a nice sounding name you can do so. It is military rule just the same and will remain so for several years to come in all probability. Congress placed the islands under the President's direction and the only way he can manage them is through the War department." what is it?

ONE of the Washington republican newspapers says:

membered tasks in the last Congress, but aban-tion was taken in the last Congress, but aban-doned under pressure from high sources.

It may be stated authoritatively that the republican congressional committee will take up the case for consideration next winter and up the case for consideration next winter and there will be some important conferences among the leaders. Under the new apportionment, the southern states get 137 seats in the House of Espresentatives and 57 of them are apportioned on the colored population that either has been or will be disfranchised. This situation, in the eyes of some of the republican leaders, is intolerable, and they propose to take steps to bring it to the attention of the party.

Now this is an open avowal of the leaders to intention of the republican leaders to throttle the South and it is certain that they will resort to every means in their power to carry out their plan. In some of the northern States capitation taxes and other restrictions upon suffrage disfranchise almost as many voters as do the constitutional enactments in the southern States, but no attempt is made to reduce the congressional representation in the north to conform with the voting population. No, but laws which would not be considered for a moment in the North will be, if possible, forced upon the South and this alone is sufficient to arouse every southern man and northern democrato put forth their every effort to prevent the success of the attempt of the republican party to reduce the South's representation in the House of Representatives.

A LETTER from Richmond says "This gubernatorial contest has set people to speculating as to what Governor Tyler will do when he goes out of office the first of next year. A great many of the friends of the Governor want him to retire from politics. But he does not wish to leave political life. There has been considerable talk of electing the Governor to Congress when his term has expired." Now it is hoped that the friends of the Governor who wish him to retire from politics may be potential and induce him to overcome his desire to remain in public life, for certain it is, if he does not retire voluntarily the people will retire him-peace-ably if they can, forcibly if they must.

The talk about the modus vivendi to settle the Chinese indemnity question is said at the State department to emanate from Russian sources and to in no way represent the attitude of the United States. The Russian ambassa-dor here, despite the dispatch from St. Petersburg this morning saying that the Czar's government does not desire a joint guarantee of the bonds to be issued to pay the indemnity, has during the last three weeks been urging the United States to adopt this plan. The definite refusal of this government to be the plan of the government to the plan of the government to be the plan of the government to the government to be the government to the gover The definite refusal of this government to enter into any joint arrangement to indemnity may perhaps explain the St. Petersburg dispatch, but the modus vivendi idea has no official standing. newspapers says:

The republican managers are preparing to materially increase the party's strength in the House of Representatives at the next congressional election. The decision of the Supreme Court placing in Congress practically the absolute control of all insular affairs makes it a question of the first importance that the republicans should not lose their hold upon the lower house in this formative period. * * In some quarters it is believed that the realisation of the absolute necessity of controlling the House will urge the republicans to further cansideration of the republicans to further cansideration of the republicans to further cansideration of the proposition to reduce the representation in the House of those scathern states that have disfranchised the negro.
